John Grisham

About the author

John Grisham is one of the publishing phenomena of the late twentieth century. He is the highest-selling thriller writer of the 1990s: over fifty-five million copies of his novels have been sold, and they are available in thirty different languages.

Grisham was born in 1955 in Arkansas, in the southern United States. His family were poor and they moved several times when he was a child, staying wherever his father could find work. They eventually settled in Mississippi, where Grisham did well at school and went on to study law at university.

When Grisham qualified in law in 1981, he set up his own office. He often represented workers against big companies, or helped accident victims to get compensation for injuries. He also had a short career in politics, as a Democrat in local government.

One day at the Desoto County courthouse, Grisham overheard the harrowing testimony of a 12-year-old rape victim. He decided to write a novel exploring what would have happened if the girl's father had murdered her attackers. He proceeded to get up every morning at 5 am to work on the novel, called A Time to Kill, which was published in 1988. Although the book was not a best-seller, Grisham was determined to succeed as a writer. He got advice from a How to Write course and spent three years on his second novel, The Firm. This time he had a best-seller. The Firm was one of the biggest hits of 1991, spending 47 weeks on The New York Times best-seller list. He earned enough money from The Firm to close down his law office and become a full-time writer. Since then he has written a string of best-sellers including The Pelican Brief (1992), The Client (1993), and The Rainmaker (1995). They have been translated into more than thirty languages. Publishers Weekly declared him to be "the bestselling novelist of the 90s". The Rainmaker is different from most other novels and books in that it is written mostly in the present tense.

Many of Grisham's books have been made into films. The Rainmaker was turned into a film in 1997 starring Matt Damon as Rudy Baylor, Mickey Rourke as Bruiser Stone, and Claire Danes as Kelly Riker.

It is said that he earns well over $25 million a year from his books and from movie rights. He is a born-again Christian, attends a Baptist church on Sundays, teaches at Sunday school, and works with overseas orphans. He is married with two children, and divides his time between his home in Charlottesville, Virginia, and Oxford, Mississippi.

When he's not writing, Grisham devotes time to charitable causes, including mission trips with his church group. As a child he dreamt of becoming a professional baseball player, and now serves as the local Little League commissioner. He has built six ballfields on his property and hosts children from 26 Little League teams.

Despite his success, Grisham has kept his license to practice law, and at the beginning of 1996 he returned to the courtroom to continue a case he had worked on before he was rich and famous. A railway worker had been killed at work and his widow was asking the company for compensation. Grisham won a lot of money for her and refused to accept a fee for his work.

Summary

The idea of the "rainmaker" in the title of this story comes from American Indian culture. The job of the rainmaker was to carry out traditional rituals to make the rain fall. In the same way, the young lawyer follows the traditional ways of the American courtroom to make money fall into the hands of his client.

Chapter 1: Rudy Baylor has nearly finished law school but hasn't yet passed the bar examination. He secures a position with a Memphis law firm, which he loses when the firm is bought out by another larger firm. A poor couple, Dot and Buddy Black, ask for his help. Their son, Donny Ray, has leukemia and needs a bone marrow transplant, but their health insurance company won't pay for the operation. Rudy thinks they have a very strong case against the company, but he has no job and no money and isn't licensed as a lawyer.

The Rainmaker

Chapters 2–3: Rudy gets a job in Jonathan Lake's law firm and passes the Black case to the lawyer, Barry Lancaster, who hired him. But Barry just uses him to get the case and then tells him that Lake doesn't want to hire him. Rudy is furious and goes to Lake's office to see him but nobody is there. Later the office is burned down and a security guard killed. Rudy is suspected of murder and arson. Desperate for a job, Rudy reluctantly allows "Prince" Thomas, the crooked owner of a sleazy bar where he's been working part-time, to introduce him to J. Lyman "Bruiser" Stone, a ruthless but successful ambulance-chasing lawyer, who makes him an associate. But to earn his fee, Rudy is required to hunt for potential clients at the local hospital where he must contact injury cases and get them to sign up for a court case with the firm. He is introduced to Deck Shifflet, a less-than-ethical former insurance assessor, now "paralawyer" (having failed to pass the Bar examination after six tries). Rudy works for Bruiser and files suit for the Black case.

Chapters 4–5: Rudy starts his career with ambulance chasing. Whilst preparing the case and also waiting about in the local hospital, he meets and later falls in love with Kelly Riker, a beautiful young woman but a battered wife whose husband has beaten her so badly that she is now in hospital. Rudy is cleared of the charges of murder and arson.

Chapters 6–9: Having passed the bar examination, Rudy prepares to fight the team of lawyers employed by Great Benefit Insurance. It is a daunting task. He has never argued a case before a judge and jury—but he now finds himself up against a group of experienced and ruthless lawyers from a large firm, headed by Leo F. Drummond. But the judge, Harvey Hale, is the old friend of Great Benefit's lead lawyer. Things do not go smoothly. Meanwhile, Bruiser gets into trouble and Judge Hale dies. Rudy and Deck Shifflet then set up their own firm of lawyers. The newly-appointed judge, Kipler, gives Rudy a ray of hope as he shows more understanding toward victims. Before the trial commences, however, the Blacks' son dies.

Chapters 10–13: The case goes to trial and Rudy uncovers a scheme that Great Benefit ran throughout 1991 which was to deny every insurance claim submitted, regardless of the validity of the claim. Rudy collects evidence and builds up a picture of how Great Benefit makes huge profits by cheating the people who have their insurance policies with them. Great Benefit was playing on the odds that the insured would not consult an attorney (which Dot Black didn't do until it was too late for Donny Ray). A former employee of Great Benefit testifies that the scheme generated an extra $40 million in revenue for the company. Finally, Rudy wins the case.

Chapters 14–15: During the Black trial, Rudy continues to pursue Kelly. Kelly is beaten by her husband again. Rudy wants to save her, and this eventually ends up in a violent fight with her husband while helping Kelly retrieve items from her home. At the end of the fight, with Rudy about to beat the husband to death, Kelly intervenes and tells him to leave. Later, Rudy manages to save her from the charge of murder. Meanwhile, Great Benefit quickly declares itself bankrupt, thus allowing them to avoid paying the damages. There is no payout for the grieving parents and no fee for Rudy, although Dot Black was never concerned with the money from the trial. In fact, she testified that if awarded any money from Great Benefit, she would donate all of it to the American Leukemia Society.

Background and themes

The Rainmaker has a large cast of characters and not all of them are honest or decent. Grisham seems to be saying that the world we live in is often corrupt, selfish, and greedy. To this extent he is part of the school of tough detective writers in the US such as Raymond Chandler, James Ellroy, and Patricia Cornwell.

Legal thriller: Most of John Grisham's novels are legal thrillers—exciting stories set in the world of the law. His novels are "page turners", that is, books which people find very hard to put down once they have started reading them. They have a consistent theme: his heroes are ordinary people who fight the powerful institutions of society—and win. Grisham finds ideas for his stories in the cases he worked on as a lawyer. He often represented workers against big companies. One day he sat in a courtroom listening to a very young girl testify against a rapist. "I never felt such emotion and human drama in my life," he told People magazine. "I became obsessed wondering what it would be like if the girl's father killed that rapist and was put on trial. I had to write it down." And this became his first novel.

The Rainmaker

Grisham uses the tension of the courtroom atmosphere to add suspense and strong emotion to his stories. In The Rainmaker, his young lawyer, Rudy Baylor, brings laughter, tears, anger, and surprise witnesses to the courtroom. All Grisham's novels are gripping and tense. One surprising event quickly follows another. They provide perfect material for the film thriller and have attracted some of Hollywood's most expensive stars.

David and Goliath: John Grisham's novels are very popular in America. They give the reading public a chance to support the "little guys" against the "big guys". The big guys in Grisham novels include big business, US government agencies (the CIA and the FBI), the Mafia, and the Ku Klux Klan. Lawyers and the law play a more important part in American society than in other countries. However, it is usually rich and/or well-educated Americans who take out court cases. The poor in America are just as shy of the law as the poor are in other countries. The basic idea of the story in The Rainmaker is that poor and/or uneducated people are afraid to get involved with the law. Great Benefit, the insurance company at the heart of the story, relies on the fact that only one in twenty-five of the people who make a claim for money from them will use a lawyer to try to get their claim paid.

Ambulance chasing: Under the US legal system, a lawyer can take on a client for a percentage of the amount that the client wins from the court. It may be millions of dollars, it may be nothing. This is called "no win, no fee" and it allows people with little or no money to take out court cases. Many lawyers in the US find a lot of their clients by "ambulance chasing"—as Deck Shifflet does in The Rainmaker. This means that the lawyer visits victims of accidents in the hospital and offers to represent them.

Domestic violence: Domestic violence is rife in our society but it isn't often talked about in the media. Grisham takes the opportunity of denouncing this often hidden crime.

- 8 Read carefully and discuss: The whole novel is written in the first person and in the present tense. Read out or write on the board a few sentences to illustrate this. As an example read this sentence from page 9: I leave Barry's office ... Mrs. Skinner some flowers. Get students to read the sentences back to you using the third person and the past tense. Then ask students to discuss these questions in small groups: Which style do you prefer? Why? Why do you think the author only uses the present tense?
- 9 Read carefully and discuss: On page 2, there is the letter from Great Benefit:

On seven previous occasions, this company has denied your claim in writing. We now deny it for the eighth and final time. You must be stupid, stupid, stupid!
- Ask students to think about the following questions: *What is the purpose of this letter? From the letter, can you tell the attitude of Great Benefit? Do you think it is a rude letter? - 16 Discuss: In Chapter 6, Drummond objects to Rudy's arguing the motion because he has no license. But Rudy insists on handling the case as he has passed the bar examination. Ask the students to discuss the following:
If you were a beginner lawyer like Rudy, would you have the courage and confidence to argue the motion? Write at least five reasons in less than 200 words.
If you were Drummond, what would be your reasons to reject such a lawyer who doesn't have any court experience? Write five reasons.
